

Hispanic Heritage Month Annual Lecture

“One of Two Persons Added to U.S. Population is Latino: An Overview of the 2020 Census”

by

Rogelio Saenz, Ph.D.

September 29, 2021

1-2:30 PM

This presentation will provide a broad overview of demographic trends related to Latinos in the United States coming out of the 2020 census. The presentation will also highlight trends in Michigan and the Midwest. The discussion will highlight the major opportunities and challenges for Latinos over the next decade based on these demographic trends.

Rogelio Sáenz is a sociologist and demographer at the University of Texas at San Antonio (UTSA), where he is professor in the Department of Demography. He has written extensively in the areas of demography, Latina/os, race, inequality, immigration, COVID-19, health disparities, aging, public policy, and social justice. Sáenz is co-author of Latinos in the United States: Diversity and Change and co-editor of the International Handbook of the Demography of Race and Ethnicity. He has written widely over the last year on the impact of COVID-19 on the Latino community. Sáenz regularly writes op-ed essays and research briefs for a variety of media and academic outlets throughout the country. He recently received the 2020 Saber es Poder Academic Excellence Award from the University of Arizona's Department of Mexican American Studies and the 2021 Cox-Johnson-Frazier Award from the American Sociological Association.
