

Michigan's Hispanics: A Socio-Economic Profile

Robert Aponte & Marcelo E. Siles

Statistical Brief CIFRAS-01

September 1994

ABSTRACT

The Hispanic or Latino population in Michigan is quickly becoming a more prominent member of the community. This is partly due to the group's increased population size, but it is also due to their impressive representation in the labor force, a representation among school-aged youth as well as their rapidly increasing presence in the business world. However, as subsequently shown, poverty and underrepresentation in high income jobs continue to be areas of needed attention for the advancement of Michigan's Latinos.